The Tale of a Poor Prisoner Who Was

Locked Out. No anecdotic recollections of Governor Curtin would be complete which did not include some of his own stories, for he was the prince of yarn spinners. A group of friends were talking one day about the reformatory influence of kindness in prison discipline. "I've heard a good deal about kind prison keepers," said Mr. Gurtin when the others had finished, "but I never met one myself who was the equal of an old fellow who kept the county jail in the village where I began practicing law. He fed the convicts so well and housed them so comfortably that they became greatly attached to him and he could trust them to go about at will. He used to hire them out to the farmers in the neighborhood during the harvest season and turn an honest penny for the taxpayers in that way. Early one morning, while I was sweeping out my office, I was approached by one of the convicts. Young man," said be, "are you the BWHY. Well, hold on, my friend," said I. "We have got to have a reason to show to the court before we can ask for a writ." I've reason enough," he exclaimed. "The cruelty of the keeper makes life there unbearable."

'Oh, pshaw!" said I. "Don't tell me such nonsense as that. There never was a kinder keeper in charge of a jail."
"Judge for yourself," he insisted.
